Belleville CENTRAL ONTARIO'S Commercial Capital

Few places in Canada can claim as many natural advantages as this beautifully located city. As an educational centre it has been known throughout the northern part of the continent for over half a century, and scores of men who are to-day controlling the mercantile, manufacturing and educational interests of this country look back with a thrill of pride and interest to their early days, spent either as scholars in the Public Schools or as students in her colleges.

As a manufacturing centre, Belleville has been the birthplace and cradle for some of the greatest industries of this Province, has unusually favorable facilities for the building up of a great

Now, when cultivated farms and the comfortable homes of a prosperous and contented people constitute the limning of a picture of rural life, the scene is exceedingly pleasing. We can only envy what it was, when the wild grandeur of those primitive days were unfolded to the zealous French missionaries and soldiers, dressed in the emerald glow of the summer months, or with icy fitters of winter to awe the beholder. The charm that captivates now is reflected in artificial as well as natural features of beauty. Then nature furnished the chief feature of delight, and, stead of the wild forest and natural grandeur that greeted their ancestors, they will look upon cultivated farms and the comfortable homes of a happy, contented people. The Indian wigwam and the bark canoe have disappeared, and in their place are seen the stately mansions of civilized life and the swift-gilding craft of an active and extended commerce. The Loyalist refugees, when they first inspected the forest-fringed shores through which the Moira flows and on the hills which rise gently on either side of the stream, whilst to the south is the Bay of Quinte—a paradise for the sportsman, the angler, the yachtsman, the oarsman, and the artist. Industrial hive, and is the natural outlet of the great mining district of Hastings and neighboring counties.

As a market, it is acknowledged to be the best in Central Ontario, or, in fact, for its size, in Ontario, and how could it be otherwise, for is it not in the heart of one of the richest tracts of fertile and were prodigal of harmony."

From the emerald holms of the St. Lawrence River, through the winding courses of the Long Reach, and on to the western limit of the narrow, irregular bay, a succession of delights must have met the gaze and elicited the praise of Champlain and his followers. It was, too, roving beast of prey were the principal sounds that disturbed the universal quiet. The lordly pine lifted his evergreen top far above the surrounding trees, the gnarly oak stood as a sentinel to mark the flight of ages, and the umbrageous maple spread its leafy branches in the full freedom of undisputed sovereignty. But with the advent of the hardy pioneer settlers, the noble U. S. L. band, there came a foe to primitive solitude and a disturber of nature's repose. A relentless war was proclaimed against the wild grandeur of the wilderness by muscular arms which pressed victory from the start. The initial clearings about the pioneer's log cabin soon expanded, and the lapse of a few decades brought a great change in the country bordering the bay from Kingston to the Carrying Place. A century or more, with its multiplied agencies for accomplishing the purposes of the resolute men, has transformed the wilderness into a garden. The forest shade has receded from river and bay until many miles intervene, and a day's journey, with the aid of steam, towards the inhospitable north, is necessary to reach it.

The men and women who endured so much for conscience' sake, and made the Bay of Quinte district the cradle of civilization in this Province, have left memories that time cannot efface. Their names, as well as their virtues, have been bequeathed to succeeding generations; and the descendants of those hardy pioneers, who have moved to other parts of the earth will rejoice to hear that Belleville occupies the first place among the flourishing towns and cities that nestled by Quinte's limpid waters.

Those of them that may be privileged to return to the home of their childhood's days will come with the conveniences provided by the genius of man in this latter part of the nineteenth century. Inof the bay, were delighted with the prospect, and willingly ventured their future happiness in establishing new homes for themselves and children. They pronounced it a land of promise, which, though not literally "bowing with milk and honey," possessed all the necessary elements of prosperity. The flag they loved so well, and for which they had voluntarily suffered so much, waved over it, and 'neath its protecting folds they lived in peace and security. The same flag waves from staff and tower to-day, hallowed by the same memories, but with brighter lustre won from battlefields and by diplomacy. It is still the flag of British freedom, the emblem of strength, courage and liberty of conscience.

A FEW FACTS TOLD IN SHORT SENTENCES

Belleville is one of the most beautifully situated cities in Canada, being on the River Moira at its confluence with the Bay of Quinte, in the County of Hastings, of which it is the county seat. As a place of residence, Belleville is most attractive. It is charmingly situated in the valley between Front and Bridge streets, publishes here The Canadian Accountant, a standard work, used largely throughout Canada and the United States. The Belleville Business College is centrally situated on the corner of Hotel and Pinnacle streets, Belleville has four Masonic, two Oddfellows, two Foresters lodges, and

G. T. R., which connects with the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway at North Bay, and with the various branch lines of that system at other points. It is the most important place upon the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway between Montreal and Toronto, and extensive repair shops and roundhouses are located here. The North Hastings Railway communicates direct with the extensive mining regions of the north, only 20 miles distant. During the season of na-

of two counties. The Bay of Quinte barley, cheese and canned goods have an established reputation, and large quantities are annually shipped to the United States and to Europe. There are also mines of iron, gold, galena, lithographic stone, slate, mica and asbestos existing a few miles north of the city, adjacent to the line of railway, and smelting works will be established here in the near future. Excellent limestone quarries are conveniently near to the eastern and northern suburbs of the city, and the superiority of the stone is so marked that shipments of it are made to all parts of the Dominion. It was used exclusively in the Murray Canal, Sault Ste. Marie and Kingston dry dock. These quarries at present employ 100 men.

Look at Belleville on the map and note its advantageous and central geographical position. Go and enjoy Belleville's hospitality and note its natural advantages and solid worth. Large quantities of timber of all kinds come down the River Moira every spring, and square timber in vast quantities is also received into the harbor (where it is rafted) over the Midland Railway from the Georgian Bay district, and can be bought at reasonable rates. The River Moira furnishes excellent water power, and there is a large area of water front. Labor of all kinds is cheap and abundant, the health of the city is good, the market plentiful, living economical and rents are reasonable. The following chartered banks have branches in the city, to wit:—The Bank of Montreal, the Merchants' Bank, the Bank of Commerce, and the Dominion Bank. There are also private bankers, brokers and loan societies. The Hastings Loan & Investment Society has its head office here. The population is about 11,000 and steadily increasing. The streets are well lighted.

A glance at its history will take us back to the time of the French domination in this part of North America, a period of nearly three hundred years. It is generally accepted as an historical fact that Samuel Champlain, in the year 1615, when returning from his unfortunate expedition against the powerful Iroquois tribe of Indians, passed down the Trent River to its mouth, and then followed the bay to the St. Lawrence. It is also recorded that the great French navigator and colonizer, with his followers, wintered on the very spot where Belleville now stands. This gives the city a special claim to distinction in connection with the charming piece of water along which it is so beautifully located. It is not our intention to cite historical dates and events that are more or less familiar to all our readers. When the venturesome Champlain and gallant La Salle first looked upon the wooded shores and scenic beauty of the bay, there must have been a rare panorama of delight to tempt their further exploration. Then the primeval solitude reigned supreme and

R., and abundant supplies of charcoal can be obtained for smelting works. The death rate in the city is almost the lowest in the Dominion, account of the healthy character of its situation, the proximity of the water and the activity of the Board of Health. Cricket, Belleville's Board of Trade and weekly cheese market are active and progressive institutions. It has sev-

Two of the largest canning factories in Canada and a large evaporator, the Mac Machine Works, Ashby Carriage Factory and other carriage works, several large wash and door factories, flouring mills, woolen mills, a large furniture factory, a biscuit factory, corset factory, tannery, two potteries, and a host of other industries. There is also a large division of the G. T. R. and a large number of men are employed and have their residence here.

The office of the veteran solicitor of the Grand Trunk Railway, Mr. Bell, and his staff has been in Belleville since the road was built.

The waterworks system is one of the most complete and perfect in the country. One hundred and sixty-five hydrants furnish full protection for fire purposes, and there exists a paid fire brigade and consequently low insurance rates rule.

It is a live and enterprising city, and what its citizens desire is to make Belleville a greater residential and industrial center than it is at present. They say, therefore, to all manufacturers: "Come and see us and judge of the character of our development and our activity, or write and make us an offer of what you would propose to do, how many men you would propose to employ, and what you think we should do in return. We will treat you with the greatest fairness and bulldog promptness, granting you free leases, exemption from taxation, and, in case of building works, such a reasonable and substantial cash encouragement as may be

ITS OPPORTUNITIES.
To capitalists, Belleville offers many opportunities of a rare and enviable play in account of its covering so much territory, and the many suburbs which are in reality part of the city, yet removed a considerable distance from the business centre, and the distance of the G.T.R. depot from the centre of the city and the harbor, render an electric street railway a necessity and offers an opening for a profitable investment seldom to be found. Besides the suburban service, which would be easily built, owing to the naturally level ground over which it will pass, a service to Trenton ten miles distant, should also be a good franchise to procure, as it would pass through a densely populated district, and the business interests of the two places are closely connected.

THOS. CARMAN,

The rich iron and gold mines at her back door assure her of being the Pittsburgh of Canada as soon as the vast wealth of her minerals have attracted capitalists to invest their money in the province and develop the mineral resources. Large quantities of ore of the finest quality for manufacturing Hessemeyer steel have been exported, and the permanence and vast extent of the deposits are assured. Smelting works would pay well here. In connection with Mr. W. N. Ponton, the chairman of the special committee appointed to look after the electrical interest in this direction, the fact that his institution has become no longer a structure we fully brought out by the many factors making inquiries, others enquiring for further information about the facilities and inducements the city has to offer, which were lying on his desk awaiting the consideration of the committee.

Belleville has steadily gone forward during the past decade, despite the many drawbacks and adverse events which have occurred, and the prosperity of her future is assured by her splendid geographical position and natural facilities for shipping and manufacturing, and the like, en-

ITS FINANCIAL CONDITION.

The statement made by Ald. Wainman, Chairman of the Finance Committee, at the meeting of Council, July 24th, 1883, will give an idea of the financial standing of the city, and is here given verbatim.

In moving the Council into committee of the whole Ald. Wainman introduced the estimates and briefly addressed the Council as follows:

T. CARMAN'S RESIDENCE.

"Your Worship—In rising to move the Council into committee of the whole on estimates, I have very great pleasure in acknowledging you, Mr. Mayor, and the several Aldermen on the fact that after due provision is made for the wants of the various committees, the uncontrollable expenditures, special public improvements, sinking fund and ordinary contingencies that we are enabled to say to the taxpayers of this city and the people generally that Belleville has cleared off her floating debt without raising the rate of taxation and has not embarked in the parsimonious practice of frontage debentures.

"This statement, Mr. Mayor, bare and unimportant though it may seem, is one that no other city in Canada is able to make.

"Couple this with the further fact that, by prudence and economy, this Council is in the unique position of being able to boast that no other city has less debt per capita, has more reliable assets for that debt, or is more financially sound than prime of our capitalists, besides the fact that manufacturers do not realize, apparently, that this is the true centre of agricultural Canada, and that no forest stream surpasses our Mohr—I say the situation being so favorable with all these important factors at present overlooked.

"Belleville, if encouraged, latent no longer, would spring into action."

"We have cleared the decks for action this year and must leave to future Councils the answer to this momentous question.

"We report to you an increased amount of an increasing population, an increasing commercial activity and standing, and an increasing faith on the part of our citizens in ourselves as regards present progress and future prospects.

Our net and only debt is now $400,000, covered by debentures, for which we are very properly provided by sinking fund.

Of this $400,000 debenture, $16,000 are maturing annually, and we have the means to provide therefor in a way that will be satisfactory to the citizens and worthy of this Council. Our assets amount to $27,000 and our annual income therefrom equals nearly 2 per cent of the whole."

ITS ATTTRACTIONS.

Among the first questions that is asked by a prospective resident who is looking for a place to build himself a home is, first, is it a healthy locality?

Second, is it a place of education without knowledge of their value or want of enter-

Is too well known to need anything more being said in answer to that question.

As the reader, if space and time could permit, to take the time in to education or reality, for a trip down the bay, and give them a glimpse of the many beautiful spots that are within easy reach of the city, that would be the best answer. The opportunities for pleasure are, indeed, many, but none will give greater pleasure than a trip down the bay, and the many boats passing up and down make it easy of accomplishment. After passing through the Murray Canal, and on down past the majestic River Trent, as it sweeps on its way to the bay, the tea-gardens and the pleasure gardens, passing several islands, come to the water's edge, and on either side the delightful eye beholds the large and comfortable farm buildings, and the vast fields, with their evenly-ploughed furrows, the delicious browns of the seed-

"Crowds of bees, giddy with clover, Crowds of grasshoppers skip at our feet, Crowds of larks that their matins hang over, Thanking the Lord for a life so sweet."

Or, if it should be in the harvest time,

Mr. H. H. Ayer, a well-known Tappan, N.Y., man of Hillsboro, Va., sends this testimony to the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla: "Several years ago, I hurt my leg, the injury leaving a sore which led to chronic gout. My sufferings were extreme, and I turned from the Keg to the smaller being a sold sore, which began to extend to other parts of the body. After trying various remedies, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before long found relief; the first bottle effected a complete cure."
